Grand School and Adventure Stories.

THE COMMANDER'S BIRTHDAY.

READ THIS FIRST.

The train containing the boys of St. Winifred's slowed down alongside Ferndalo Station platform. "You bounder! Why didn't you yell?" Lecke, a Fourth-Former, shouted the question to Clive Lawrence—a new boy, but one in no way shy or constrained. "What was there to yell about?" asked Clive. Locke sniffed. "Oh, of course, you don't know; you're a now kid. We're at daggers drawn with the Fifth at St. Winnle's, and Kendal and Keene, who are standing over there, are the heads of the Fifth." Clive joins the party of Fourth-Formers, and they make a rush for the brakes. They are stopped by the Fifth, who secure their brake and drive off. The Fourth, however, led by Clive Lawrenc, ecapture the Sixth Form brake. (Now go on with the story.)

The Arrival of the Fourth.

Most of the Fourth Formers were crammed in the brake now. The timid ones held back, but that mattered little, as there was not possibly room for all.

The yehicle moved off, to the shouting of the excited juniors and the cracking of the whip. Fisher and Locke were entering into the spirit of the thing now, and their tree were gleaning.

were entering into the spirit of the thing now, and their cres were gleaming.

There was a shout from behind.

"Stop that brake, you young scoundrels! Stop at once!"

The juniors looked round. A tall, elegantly-dressed young fellow was waving a lavender kid-gloved hand to them frantically, his tall hat nearly falling off in his excitement.

"That's Courtney!" said Fisher uneasily.

"Stop that brake!"

Courtney, of the Sixth, was running after them. A crewd.

Courtney, of the Sixth, was running after them. A crowd of Sixth Formers were staring at the juniors in blank amazement. Trevelyan came out of the station.

amazement. He shouted to the youngsters, but they were too far off to hear his words. The brake was going at a good speed now, and Courtney dropped behind in the race and stopped running.

"Hurrah!" shouted Fisher.

"There's bound to be a frightful row over this," said Sugden.

"Who cares?" said Clive.
"Oh, none of us!" grinned Locke. "I don't! They can't expel the wholo of the Fourth, and wo'll all stand in together over it. They can't flog us all; but I fancy it will mean a caning all round and a long gating."
"Let it."

"Let it."
"Oh, let it, by all means," agreed Locke. "You're a thundering cool hand, Clive Lawrence, at all events."
The brake dashed gaily on. The juniors soon sighted the Fifth Form brake, going at a much more moderate pace, ahead.

"I say, can you drive, Lawrence?" asked Fisher.

"Like a fish," said Clive—"I mean, yes; I've driven fourin-hand at home, and I know how to handle a team. If I didn't, that wouldn't have made any difference on this occasion, though."

"Well, I'm jolly glad you can drive, anyway."

"Hallo, look at the Fifth; they've seen us!"

The Fifth-Formers were all looking back in amazement at the crowded brake rushing on after them. The juniors waved their caps and shouted as they came within hearing.

"My hat," exclaimed Kendal, "they're in the Sixth Form brake! The little asses will get into a fearful row over brake! The little asses will get into a fearful row over Never thought Fisher had such a nerve," said Keene.

"Neither did I."
"They're going to try to pass us, I verily believe."
"There's not room in the lane."

"Hi, there, you kids, keep your cattle into

"The chert, year white, and the chip Clive careked his white, "Raist Gpt out of the way!"
"You can't pass!"
"Thut's a pury because we're going to,"
"I tell you there's no room!" shouted Kendel. "You'd the on collision!"
"Get to one side."
"Get to one side."

"Go to one side."
"Get to one side."
"We can't, without going into the ditch."
"Go into the ditch, then," said Clive cheerfully.
"Go into the ditch, then," said Clive cheerfully.
The Fourth-Formers roaced with laughter. The slate, we fill there was certainly very barely toon; The Fourth-Formers roused with laughter. The slate the Fifth was very real. The following brake was late taking them, and there was certainly very barely rough to pass in the narrow lane.

"Here, buck up, driver," shouted Kendal; "don't light these kids pass us!"

"The driver looked round. He was a slow-with.

those kids pass us!"

The driver looked round. He was a slow-witted village, and his face became alarmed as he saw the pursuing bration for ionsly down upon him.

The driver tooked totals and his face became alarmed as he saw the pursuing training furiously down upon him.

"Hallo! Whoa, there!" he yelled.

"Pull aside, then!" shouted Clive, eracking his whigh the pursuing training to the way."

"There baint no room."

"Get aside!" roared the Fourth-Formers. "We're going to pass! Get out of the way!"

Everyone in the Fourth Form brake was now franks with excitement. Half of them were on their feet, waving the excitement. Half of them were on their feet, waving the caps and yelling like demons. The horses, startled have bed in his work out out to pull them in now, if he had wanted to his work out out to pull them in now, if he had wanted to his work out out to pull them in now, if he had wanted to he was pretty certain that the dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake, and he was pretty certain that he dealing brake.

But he didn't want to. It was noternined to past to leading brake, and he was pretty cortain that the draw would pull into the ditch, or anywhere, to escape a collision would pull in passing, it would only be would pull into the ditch, or anywhere, to escape a collision of the wheels caught in passing, it would only be a question of damage to be paid for.

"Get on!" shouted Kendal. "If you let them pass uper the driver whipped up his horses. But Clive's team were dashing on furiously, and were already abreast of the lets."

dashing on turiously, and were arready apreast of the led ing brake.

"Get aside!" roared Clive.

The village driver gave one frightened look round at then jerked on his left rein, and the horses scrambled in the wide, shallow ditch, which was half-full of fern and brakes but fortunately dry. There was a terrific wheen from the Fifth-Formers as the brake lurched on the edge of the ditches on wheel went over the incline. and one wheel went over the incline. "Look out!"

With a fearful lurch the brake crashed against the helps the two near wheels boing in the ditch. The vehicle did as upset, but lay with a "list to port," as a sailor would be said, and the Fifth-Formers held on desperately.

A frenzied cheer rose from the other brake.

"Right away!" roared Fisher.

Clive had room to pass now, with about two lacks to spare. He showed his skill and his nerve by taking he cattle past at full dash, not slackening in the least. In flash the Fourth-Formers had passed, waving their caps and rellier at the Figh. yelling at the Fifth.

On, and on, and on, with rattling hoofs and justed harness, and cracking whip and exultant cheering. "Hurrah!" Down with the Fifth! Hurrah!"

The Fifth-Formers scrambled into the road. They may furious efforts to get the brake righted, but in vain. Keep and Keepe shook their fists furiously after the Form brake. But it dashed on in a cloud of dust, calculated from their sight.

vanished from their sight.

"My hat," exclaimed Fisher, "that was exciting rich lasted! We've done the Fifth, after all! We've done to brown! Ha, ha!"

"Ha, ha!" roared the juniors.

"Ha, ha!" roared the juniors.

"There's the school!"

"The gate is open. Take her right in, Lawrence, is up to the giddy door."

"What-ho!" said Clive.

The brake slackened down a little, but was still gold.

The brake slackened down a little, but was still gold.

Bight on he docked with the the old grey but to the old grey but to the clip to the cold.

Right on he dashed, right up to the old grey but its masses of ivy, that had braved the storms of Atlantic for many a hundred years. Then, with storms had a terrific cheer from the juniors, the brake to a clattering balt.

to a clattering halt.

The next moment the yelling died away, as an awaiting figure, in cap and gown, appeared in the doorgan "The Head!"

(To be continued next week.)

My readers should kindly note that the repretation of our next Saturday's issue of PLUCK is page iii. of the cover.